

SHEKNOWS®

ENTERTAINMENT

BEAUTY

LOVE

PARENTING

PETS

HOME

LIVING

FOOD

HEALTH

Parenting Expert

Get the answers to all your parenting questions.

See more >>

SheKnows : Contests and Freebies : Enter to win The Diaper Chronicle

Enter to win The Diaper Chronicle

Stay at home dad raises great kids
SheKnows Giveaways & Contests Team

vote

Rate this Giveaway:

now

When my son, Eden, was born in 2004, I decided to become a stay/work-at-home dad. I had two reasons for being so eager to immerse myself in dirty diapers, drool, and strained peas.

First, I had developed some unusual theories for raising great kids that I wanted to apply, such as raising kids in a non "child proof" house, teaching good eating and sleeping habits and potty training at 11 months. And second, I am dying.

I was born in 1970 in Tel Aviv, Israel and moved to Pittsburgh in 1996 to pursue my master's degree. Shortly after my arrival I met a beautiful French woman named Michelle and fell in love. A year later, during a routine physical, I learned I had an irreversible and life-threatening kidney disease. I was twenty-six years old, and the doctor doubted that I'd see thirty. In the face of this news, I refused to give up my dream of marrying Michelle and raising a multi-national family in the US.

Living on borrowed time, and despite everyone I knew telling me I was crazy, I decided to become a stay/work-at-home dad and shoulder most of the responsibility of caring for my son for his first year of life (and, potentially, the last twelve months of mine). I wanted to offer him proper guidance, using some very unconventional methods, through the first steps of his journey to becoming a fantastic kid and a great man—a journey I feared I might not be around to witness much of.

This humorous book takes the reader through my many successes (and failures) in my effort to properly care for my son while balancing my professional and personal life on this twelve-month journey. The book is also full of advice, tips, and insights on how to lay the foundation for raising independent, self confident and well-behaved children.

Barack Levin is author of the book "The Diaper Chronicles – A stay at home dad's quest for raising great kids," available through his website at <http://www.baracklevin.com>

Don't forget to enter hourly!

Click here to tell a friend about this contest!

PointsandPrizes.com Keyword: DIAPERCHRONICLES worth 100 points good through 12/4/09.
Not a member? Join Points and Prizes now for more free stuff!

Prize:	The Diaper Chronicles (Book)
Number of prizes:	5
Contest start date:	November 04, 2009
Contest end date:	December 04, 2009
Open to:	US/Canada residents 18 & over

<< Prev Article Next Article >>
See More Giveaways: Go <<

Comments

Reply:

Name

E-mail (required)

Comment

prurient

mark

Type the two words:

Submit Comment